

New for 2014 - Hallberg-Rassy 48 Mk II

The Hallberg-Rassy 48 Mk II is new for 2014. She offers more natural light, more comfort, and more elegance.

She follows up the Hallberg-Rassy 55, which has become an important sales success even before the world premiere at boot Düsseldorf on Saturday.

Compared to its predecessor, the Hallberg-Rassy 48, the new model is improved on 15 points, with a focus on natural light, comfort and elegance. Among other things, that includes larger saloon portlights, four hull portlights, interior accentuated with white lacquered wood paneling, more elegant windshield, slender ventilators, upgraded batteries, large 40 inch retractable TV and more.

World Premiere for the Hallberg-Rassy 55 in Düsseldorf 19-27 January 2013

The new Hallberg-Rassy 55 has been test sailed this winter and will premiere at the world's largest boatshow, boot Düsseldorf in Germany 19-27 January 2013.

The new 55 connects closely to the successful 64, with lots of natural light through large tempered glass portlights in the saloon, as well as four hull portlights and seven flush mounted skylight hatches, of which three are in the saloon alone.

White painted wooden panels in the saloon alcoves further contribute to the spacious and inviting feel.

Compared to the 54, the new 55 has as much as 30 cm longer cockpit. The helmsman's position is slightly elevated like on the 64. The superstructure of the 55 is lower in the forward end compared to the 54 and more elegant. As on the 64, there is no garage necessary for the sliding hatch. The top part of the side panel of the windscreen is slightly curved, as on the new 412. The steering pedestal allows space for an integrated 14 inch plotter.

Apart from all the comfortable push-button operation you are already used to on a Hallberg-Rassy, the 55 is offered with both bow- and stern thrusters as well as backwinding genoa sheet winches.

The whole boat is laid out for great comfort and is designed to be handled by a small crew. She has a very bright and inviting interior.

Sailing club renews fleet of ten Hallberg-Rassy 342

A private European sailing club, British Kiel Yacht Club, owns a fleet of ten Hallberg-Rassy 342s. The club has decided to renew the fleet. Once more the club has carefully investigated the market for 31-35 ft cruising boats. The result is again an order for a new fleet of ten Hallberg-Rassy 342s.

The club has made a very detailed analysis of competing boats including sea trials, inspection of building methods, analysis for possible second hand value, spare parts supply, value for money and more. The analysis has been going on for more than a year. BKYC, British Kiel Yacht Club, is based in Kiel, Germany. The British military is chartering the boats for adventurous sailing training.

BKYC has previously had a fleet of twelve Hallberg-Rassy 29 and another fleet of twelve Hallberg-Rassy 31 and now the third fleet of ten Hallberg-Rassy 342. That makes 54 Hallberg-Rassys to one buyer! The new boats are to be delivered in February 2014.
